March 4:

Four Years of War & Woe by Rev. Martin Woulfe

This month marks the fourth year that the U.S. has been at war in Iraq. Rev. Woulfe will discuss the progress and morality of this conflict.

(This will be a "Change for Change" Sunday)

March 11:

Spiritual, But Not Religious by Rev. Martin Woulfe

The title of this sermon comes from Carol Floyd, who won the right to select a preaching topic at last year's Fantasy Auction. In this sermon, Rev. Woulfe will explore what do UU's commonly mean by "spiritual" and "religious"— and see how and when they might intersect. A potluck will follow the service.

(Reminder: Set your clocks forward one hour Saturday night before you go to bed.)

March 18:

White Privilege: You Can't Give It Away by Deane Oliva

Fourth year seminarian at Meadville Lombard Theological School, Deane Oliva, will be our guest minister for this service. Folks designated as white suffer from the injustice of white privilege. Always there, we are often unaware of the insensitivity of our actions and the pain and hurt we cause others. Join us as we explore this timely issue.

(This service is a re-schedule from January 14th)

March 25:

Justice Sunday with Laurin A. Wollan, Jr.

Brother of ALUUC member Penny Wollan-Kriel, Laurin will give his American Bar Association 2006 Law Day award-winning talk, "Law, Love and the American Jury".

April 1:

Foolish Moments that Led to Spiritual Growth by Rev Martin Woulfe

On this April Fool's Day, Rev. Woulfe will share some of those foolish missteps and foibles that advanced him further along the path of spiritual growth, albeit grudgingly.

(This is a "Change for Change" Sunday)

From the Minister. . .

I enjoy taking Celeste to the cinema. Based on a dozen or so visits during the past three years, I have determined that the overwhelming majority of contemporary films for children rely on a generous dose of humor (much of which is deliberately above the heads of children – adults wrote these scripts after all) as well as fantasy and sentimentality. Whether featuring penguins, elves, fish, mice, mermaids, cars or barnyard animals, the story line has -- more often than not -- struck me as but a variation of a theme. I am tempted to begin compiling a checklist of each protagonist's attributes and perils -- and then compare those with Joseph Campbell's brilliant study, "The Hero with a Thousand Faces." Were I to do that, I suspect that I would find that today's film writers dare not deviate from Campbell's archetype.

One notable exception would be the film we most recently saw together, "The Bridge to Terabithia." I had not read Katherine Paterson's book and knew nothing of its characters or plot. I noted in passing that the story conformed in many respects to Joseph Campbell's thesis, and then was astounded by the turn of events in the film's second half. One of the two main characters, Leslie, died. This was not a typical children's film anymore. Part of me was irritated with the author for that death – was this necessary for the plot, I asked myself – but also, I wondered, was it necessary for young children to be exposed to such tragedy? While quizzing Celeste after the show, it became clear that while she was saddened by that loss, she was not nearly as agitated as her father.

I have had much to muse over, more than this space allows me to relate. Let it suffice for now that "The Bridge to Terabithia" was a powerful reminder of how unpredictable life can be. In this case, it was an example of art imitating life, not archetypes.

~ Martin

From the Board President. . .

Spring is on the way, and it's the busy season of congregation administration. We start planning next year's budget (our fiscal year begins July 1), the pledge drive is coming up, our spring fund-raiser is upon us, the Annual Meeting agenda must be set, and nominations for leadership positions are being discussed. For the Board, there's a moment of "how do we do all this?" Yet, we've done it somehow for over fifty years.

In regard to the budget, the Board has been making an effort to put the money where we want to go as a congregation. Of course, we have to pay the electric bill and the mortgage and all the other overhead expenses. But we're trying conscientiously to make our budget get us somewhere other than just maintaining the status quo.

There seems to be a general consensus that we've outgrown our hodge-podge way of managing our basic administration duties. This may be an area where devoting more resources will have an across-the-board positive effect on our programs and projects. Although not splashy, devoting a little more to our internal organization will go a long way in freeing our leadership and our minister to focus on the mission rather than the paperwork.

If you have questions or suggestions in regard to the direction and management of our congregation, now is a good time to let us know. Please feel free to contact me or other Board members any time. Thanks.

~ Jim Redlich

From the Coordinator of Religious Education. . .

Oh the birth pangs of spring! In this crazy area we call Central Illinois, you really can expect sub-zero temperatures one week and days that bring 50 degrees the next. Those lovely warmer days give one cause to hope that this season's bitter cold will soon be memories past.

Maybe not surprisingly, while we in the RE department look to the coming spring season, one thing is on our minds – the church playground. Aren't we all longing for those extended times outside? Remember childhood when those days simply COULD NOT come quickly enough? Even as we age, we never lose that desire to escape the four walls and commune with the earth, the air, and the sky.

It is significant to think back to times in our childhood when we spent hours of uninhibited physical and social learning outside. In an age of Wii, Game Boy's, Nintendo, X-Box and more, we are in danger of shorting an entire generation of kids the lessons taught only in the grass, the sand, and on a really good slide. One of the unique aspects of our belief system is that we choose to honor people as whole human beings – spiritual, emotional, psychological, and physical. We understand that all are connected. Even further, that we are connected to each other and the earth around us.

As an RE department, we invite you to help us dream the dream of an excellent outdoor play space for the children of ALUUC. I've been taken with the number of new young families that always seem to make up the line during New Member Sunday. We know that many adults recommit themselves to church life as they have young children who NEED a religious home and teaching. With them, these families bring the energy, resources, and vision to lead our church into the future. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could welcome even more of them with an enchanting, well-designed playground?

Please welcome our two new nursery attendants, Marla Johnson & Ashley Hunt. We're growing and now can accommodate even more tiny ones! Also notice the new ending time for RE classes –11:45am. Parents and families, regardless of the ending time of service, please wait until this time to pick up your children. We encourage you to relax momentarily and enjoy the coffee hour until that time.

~ Meg Schnake

Social Action Committee Fund Raising

The Social Action Committee engages in three fund raising activities on an ongoing basis. Half of the proceeds go to the ALUUC's general fund and half go to the Springfield and global community in the form of contributions from the ALUUC. These activities provide you with several opportunities:

- 1.) You can support sustainable agriculture by purchasing Equal Exchange coffee, tea and chocolate.
- 2.) You can donate money to the church while buying your groceries with scrip. The beauty of this is that it does not cost you a penny more than your regular grocery shopping costs. This is due to the discounts that stores give when they receive payment in advance, when you buy the scrip.
- 3.) Finally, you have the opportunity to rid your pockets and dresser tops of all that filthy lucre by contributing on Change for Change Sundays, the first Sunday of every month.

Please see Jack Kriel or John Malan after the service on any Sunday if you have questions or would like to participate.

Race and Class Initiative at ALUUC Upcoming Activities

February – April: The Small Group Ministry Group on Diversity will meet for 8 weeks. Twelve people have signed up for this activity facilitated by Gwen Childs and Ceceilia Haasis.

March 18: An African Mass will be given at St. Patrick's Church at ML King and South Grand at 9:30 a.m. This is a great way to see evidence of how the African Diaspora has meshed with present day Catholic services. Join the church members at a potluck after the service for good African American and African food. Bring a dish to share. Contact Leroy Jordan

April 15 at 9:30am at ALUUC: Jan Droegkamp is attending a UUSC work camp in Biloxi, Mississippi for her spring break in March. She will share her experiences with Katrina Relief activities according to UU social justice principles. Join her before our regular service. For more information, please contact Deborah Cavanaugh-Grant.

May 6 at 12:15pm at ALUUC: After the May potluck there will be a showing of the nationally known video "Tale of O." In an office setting what is it like to be an o among lots of x's? What is the experience of people of difference? Leroy Jordan, a friend of ALUUC and long time educator and activist, will facilitate a discussion of the video to explore people of difference-the x's and the o's. For more information, please contact Jan Droegkamp.
