

Sunday Morning Services

10:30 am

February 3, 2019

When the Stars Shine Above, Rev. Martin Woulfe

On a clear night you can see forever... probing the night sky, observing the stars. Planets, shooting stars, and of course the moon. How has the “starlit sky” above influenced religion, past and present – and what happens when the celestial heavens are obscured by light pollution?

Mr. Lincoln and Rev. Parker: Two Radicals in Faith, Rev. Martin Woulfe

President Lincoln was a deeply religious person – and he himself once remarked that his adult faith was informed by the radical Unitarian faith of the Rev. Theodore Parker. How did this happen? How might this deepen our appreciation of the 16th President?

Gandhi and Non-Violence, Rev. Martin Woulfe

The face of Mohandas Gandhi is said to be the one of the most recognizable of any person. But what exactly were his teachings, and how did they influence Martin Luther King, Jr. ... and the UU Movement? Are those principles still relevant today?

I See You, George Grimm-Howell, UU Seminarian

The African Sawubona greeting proclaims “I see you.” What can we learn from a spiritual practice of learning to truly see each other, and how can we affirm our commitment to seeing people of color, in particular?

The Faith We Sing, Rev. Jason Shelton

Music gives voice to our deepest longings and shapes our understanding of the deepest truths. Unitarian Universalism is experiencing an explosion of new music for our congregations and choirs, which says something about our health and vitality as a faith movement. We'll explore music's role in shaping and transforming our communities with Rev. Jason Shelton, one of our leading composers and musicians.
