Faith and the Public Morality, by Eric T. Freyfogle, JD,

Research Professor, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign

Professor Freyfogle, Swanlund Chair Emeritus (College of Law), will speak on “Faith and the Public Morality” as linked to events of the day. “For centuries Christianity supplied the cultural and spiritual frames for our shared morality. It carried forward, in the West, the stories, vocabulary, and justifications for honoring and connecting human life. Momentum kept this morality going for generations but its weakness, in the Trump era, is now stark. What lies ahead for our depleted public morality? Are we condemned to endless bickering over individual rights or is there, instead, some way to construct a new shared morality, one that is stronger, vibrant, and legitimate?”

Gandhi & Non Violence, Rev. Martin Woulfe

The face of Mohandas Gandhi is said to be one of the most recognizable of any person. But what exactly were his teachings, and how did they directly influence Martin Luther King, Jr ... and the UU Movement? Are those principles still relevant today?
