The Death with Dignity Debate, Rev. Martin Woulfe

One of the emerging issues within the State of Illinois concerns the end of life choices that are available to terminally ill patients. On October 27, 1997, Oregon became the first US state to enact a “Death with Dignity Act” which has allowed terminally-ill Oregonians to end their lives through the voluntary self-administration of lethal medications, expressly prescribed by a physician for that purpose. Since then, other states have authorized similar laws, meeting stiff opposition by some religious groups while supported by others. What is at stake in Illinois, and what are the central issues?

The Joy of Irish Blessings, Rev. Martin Woulfe

As we approach not only the arrival of Spring but also St. Patrick’s Day, let us visit the charming realm of blessings (and their inverse, curses) and consider how these have served Celtic society throughout the ages and across their diaspora.

The Art of Belonging, Rev. Martin Woulfe

Loneliness is, I believe, one of the most haunting experiences of the human experience – which suggests that at the most basic level, all hunger for connection and acceptance. How do we practice the gentle art of welcoming?

Everyday Encounters with the Sacred, Rev. Martin Woulfe

Is the Sacred something “out there,” in a realm far removed from human experience, that can only be shared via intermediaries – or, is it something much more basic and available to all?

Women & Spirituality: St. Teresa of Avila, Rev. Martin Woulfe

On this Sunday, we will consider the life and works of one of the great Spanish mystics, who has been considered by some to be a feminist in terms of her spirituality.
